

Arts and Culture Strategy

Background

This document is a revised and extended version of the Council's existing 1994 policy, following a Council decision to review this policy. The principal ambition of this review has been to update the policy, in a manner reflective of what is currently happening at local, regional and national levels and which can be implemented in planning processes.

Council staff Lyne Johnson and Tim Leyland have been assisted in this survey process by independent arts policy specialist Gisella Carr, in conjunction with Councillors Jenny Andrews and Alistair Sowman

The review process has included a survey of:

the principal policy elements to be found in arts and cultural policies around the country;

significant trends in cultural policy thinking internationally and within New Zealand over the last five years; and strategies as to how an arts and cultural policy can be made active and fully implemented.

The survey found that the existing Marlborough cultural policy is consistent with the approach taken by other local authorities in its general frame of reference but that some areas could be strengthened. Recommended changes included:

- expanding policy goals to give more emphasis to economic/regional development in addition to social/cultural goals;
- greater emphasis on developing and projecting the distinctive character of Marlborough;
- greater visibility and emphasis given to the importance of a flourishing arts and cultural sector;
- greater emphasis on establishing links with other Council policies;
- a shift to a strategy orientation by "thickening" the policy to include specified outcomes, projects and action plans.

Most of these changes are reflected in the new strategy through revised wording, some elaboration of existing concepts, and the addition of an additional goal dealing with regional development. The "action plan" component will be dealt with as part of the consultation process in the development of the Long term Council Community Plan.

The policies surveyed in the course of reviewing the 1994 policy included those of all New Zealand local authorities, plus national and international material dealing with the development of regional branding, cultural tourism and creative industries. Particular thanks are due to the Christchurch City Council, who have agreed to allow use of some of their cultural policy wording in the revised Marlborough strategy.

Definition

Art is an expression of our collective culture embracing our behaviours, habits, language, art, craft, music, dance, drama, literature, customs, religions, work, social occasions, recreation, sport and our total way of life. Through art and culture our heritage is handed down to generations to come.

Values

This Arts and Culture Strategy reflects the belief that:

- arts and culture are essential to the health and well-being of society. They should be available to all citizens, regardless of circumstance, income or ethnic origin;
- the artistic and cultural life of Marlborough is a central feature of its character and identity and helps attract permanent residents and visitors to the District;
- the benefits of an active artistic and cultural life permeate all sections of the community. Local government, because of its nature, must play a key part in the support and encouragement of such initiatives;
- a vigorous arts and cultural policy can promote programmes which enrich the lives of people in our community, whilst creating opportunities for enterprise and employment.

Principles

This Arts and Culture Strategy is based on the following principles:

- Sustainability – meeting the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.
- Diversity – of lifestyle, ethnicity and culture.
- Prosperity- abundance of opportunities.
- Accessibility – removing barriers, providing opportunity.
- Partnerships – that are open, honest, and undertaken with integrity.

Council strategic roles

This strategy recognises that there is a wide range of groups, societies, companies and individuals actively involved in the arts in Marlborough. The voluntary and private sectors have a key role to play in meeting many of the objectives and policies of this strategy. In order to meet the arts needs of Marlborough the Council needs to work closely with the other groups and individuals involved.

The Council has the following roles in achieving the strategy outcomes:

A supporter of the many groups and individuals actively involved in the arts in Marlborough.

A promoter of arts to the community, including residents, business and visitors and of Marlborough as a visitor destination.

An enabler by helping to maintain and develop the infrastructure – both physical and organisational – which supports the rich diversity of provision for the arts.

An advocate for the arts and for Marlborough's artistic talents.

A planner, co-ordinator and facilitator of arts development and the provision of the arts in Marlborough.

A custodian and manager of Marlborough's arts resources and assets.

An architect of Marlborough's physical form.

A provider of information and resources that promote the arts, arts opportunities, artworks and facilities.

The Council may adopt one or more of these roles depending on the physical needs and characteristics of the situation.
